The Bottle Fountain. What is called "The Bottle Fountain" what is called "The Bottle Fountain" may be made from an ordinary bottle and a piece of glass tube. The tube should be somewhat smaller at one end than at the other. Place the tube, with the large end down, through the corkstopper of the bottle. Let the bottle be shout two-thirds full of many two-thirds full.

about two-thirds full of water, and let about two-thirds full of water, and let the tube nearly, but not quite, reach the bottom. Blow with all your might into the tube, and quickly remove your mouth. Then, if the arrangements have been made properly, the water will spurt out and there will be a fountain of spray until the water is exhausted.

A French workman recently took ref-nge from a violent gale by lying down in the ditch beside the railway near which he was walking. Thus far his experience, though a rather uncomfort-able one, was such as would have made able one, was such as would have made a diverting subject of conversation when he reached home. Presently, however, the telegraph poles were blown down, and he became entangled in the wires which fell upon him. Even this fresh annoyance, if it had been the end of his troubles, would have merely served to heighten the interest of his recital. But before he could free himself a train came along, caught up the wires, and whirled the unlucky workman efter it until he was cut to gieces.
